

Andrew Muir, M.D.
Past President

Dr. Muir is Professor of Medicine and Chief of the Division of Gastroenterology at Duke University. Dr. Muir came to North Carolina for medical school at Duke, and he stayed at Duke for his training in internal medicine and gastroenterology. He joined the Duke faculty in 2000. He is a hepatologist, and he takes care of patients with all types of liver diseases. He conducts health services research and clinical trials of new therapies for liver diseases. Dr. Muir and his wife, Dr. Kelly Muir (also a Duke faculty member and a proud Tar Heel alumnus), have three daughters. Dr. Muir has been a member of NCSG since its inception. I feel so fortunate to have been a part of NCSG. I have developed great friendships in colleagues across the state. As the chief at Duke, I have seen the benefits in professional development for our fellows and faculty. NCSG has been so supportive in welcoming new faculty to the GI community across the state.