

Dr. Zivony is a practicing gastroenterologist and transplant hepatologist with Digestive Health Partners in Asheville, NC. Dr. Zivony is originally from Atlanta, Georgia and is an avid Atlanta Falcons and Braves fan (and now adopted Carolina Hurricanes fan). He attended undergraduate at Emory University and medical school at Medical College of Georgia. From there, Dr. Zivony pursued residency and Chief Residency at the University of Virginia followed by gastroenterology and transplant hepatology training at Oregon Health Sciences University in Portland, OR. In between his Internal Medicine and Gastroenterology training, Dr. Zivony worked as a medical officer in Navajo Nation with the Indian Health Service, fulfilling his passion for rural/underserved health care. He came to Asheville in 2015 and has loved living in and caring for the people of Western North Carolina. Dr. Zivony and his wife, Ashley, have three children. They enjoy spending time with family, friends, and neighbors among the trails and waterfalls of the beautiful mountains they now call home. Dr. Zivony has been a member of NCSG since his arrival to North Carolina. He loves the high quality of the annual academic meeting as well as the ability the society provides to foster friendships and relationships among gastroenterologists throughout the Old North State.