

Wood Gibbs

Dr. Gibbs received his BS in Business Administration from UNC Chapel Hill and subsequently earned his medical degree from Wake Forest University School of Medicine. He was Chief Resident of Internal Medicine at the University of North Carolina Hospitals and completed his Gastroenterology fellowship at Wake Forest University Baptist Medical Center. A native of New Bern, NC, he returned to his hometown with his wife, Sarah Catherine, in 2012 joining Southern Gastroenterology Associates, part of Coastal Carolina Health Care practicing general gastroenterology. He and his wife are proud parents to daughter, Elizabeth, and son, Hayes. I have been fortunate enough to attend annual NCSG meetings as a fellow and am currently serving on the NCSG board since 2020. I value my membership at NCSG, particularly in fostering relationships with academic and community practice colleagues across NC. I am proud of the Society's advocacy in improving GI health throughout our state.
